

Formação Transversal em: Estudos Internacionais

Código	Título	CH	Ementa
LET404 TV0	Understanding Contemporary Korean Culture	30	This course is designed to introduce students to dynamic contemporary Korean culture and the Korean Wave, "Hallyu". By taking an interdisciplinary approach to the topic, students will be able to learn why, how and what questions about Korean value, behavior and current issues rather than compilations of factual information. Topics will include imagined Korean culture, hybridity in Korean Culture, Identity Change and Korea as Destiny, etc. Students will be encouraged to share their experiences and views on the topics and compare them to situations in the societies and cultures of their own culture. during class breakout sessions.
UNI140	Constitutionalism and Democracy in Comparative Perspective	30	Constitutionalism: Origins. Comparative Constitutional Law: Methodology. Liberal constitutionalism. Constitutionalism and authoritarianism. Authoritarian constitutionalism. Unstable constitutionalism. Abusive constitutionalism. Transitional constitutionalism. Global constitutionalism. Populist constitutionalism. Constitutional Decomposition. Transitions. Decay of democracy. Objectives: a) to enable a critical management of Comparative Constitutional Law; b) to face the concepts of authoritarianism, legitimacy and democracy; c) to analyze the role of judicial practices in the application, the effectiveness, but also the denaturation of the elements of current constitutionalism.
UNI174	Topics in International Studies II: Getting from College to Career: Career Management	30	This is an introductory course designed to guide under graduating students on planning their career considering the transition from academy to labor market. Topics will include concepts of career in the contemporaneity, career anchors, career scripts, career images, career paths, social network, different generations in the workplace, drawing up a curriculum and making a career plan.
UNI 174	Topics in International Studies II: Introduction to Law and Development	30	This course reviews the existing literature on the relationship between law and national development, particularly in regards to: determinants of development; institutional theories of development; rule of law; political regimes; ethnic conflict; gender; public administration; corruption; state-owned enterprises versus privatization and public-private partnerships; international trade; foreign direct investment; and foreign aid.
UNI 174	Topics International Studies II: The American Short Story and the Politics of Print	30	This course examines the development of the short story in the United States from the early nineteenth to the late twentieth century. Our emphasis for the semester will be explicitly political. On the one hand, we will consider the social, economic, and cultural conditions that informed the production and reception of American literature from its beginnings. On the other hand, we will also assess the "politics" that attends the interpretive work that we perform as readers whenever we engage with literary writings from any historical period.
UNI175	Topics in International Studies III: Global Health and Diplomacy: Operational Concepts and Contemporary Practices	45	This course has a flexible content and intends to focus on health diplomacy as it relates to health issues that transcend national boundaries as well as how they are being addressed by different groups and at different levels of governance.

UNI175	Topics in International Studies III: Global Perspectives of Indigenous Health	45	Marked by the profound racial and socioeconomic inequalities of Brazilian society, the SARS-CoV 2 / Covid-19 pandemic has highlighted the differentials in collective health between indigenous peoples and other Brazilian populations. The course will address the issues from local to global and the risks and benefits of international institutions. It will seek to develop the basic cultural competence of students in Primary Care for Indigenous Health. It will address the issue of structural and social determinants of indigenous health, especially the environment; the role of SUS; indigenous health at a local and global level, discussed within the framework of possible and necessary interculturality in the current situation, seeking inspiration from indigenous health professionals and their practices that seek an integration between official medicine in Brazil and traditional indigenous knowledge.
UNI176	Topics in International Studies IV: International Finance	60	The demand and supply of money in the international financial markets. Exchange rates and the relative values of currencies. Risk management and hedging by companies with international operations. International portfolio investment and international projects valuation. Long-term financing of international investment projects. The macroeconomic environment of international finance. Financial instruments and tools for managing foreign exchange and country risk, raising capital in international financial markets.
UNI 176	Topics in international studies IV: Population Mobility in Latin America in Historical Perspective	60	The last census round suggests that the Latin's America mobility pattern is characterised by some long-term continuities, such as the persistency of high rates of emigration, as well as changes in the volume and direction of flows – especially inside the region – and in the composition and characteristics of migrants – ever more diverse in terms of their origins and motives. The lectures and readings of the course will focus on the study of the causes and consequences of international population movements and their multiple social, economic, demographic and political dimensions in Latin America. The students will also learn about the historical and contemporary theoretical and methodological debates in the study of population mobility in the region and the world. Students are expected to be able to critically discuss the dynamics, opportunities and challenges of international population mobility and its political and socioeconomic implications.